When you work as a scientist and have a religious faith there is an (often unspoken) assumption that scientific beliefs and practices can be reconciled with religious beliefs and practices. This two-day conference will unpack inspect, and discuss that assumption, with an eye to enriching our view of both science and faith.

The conference brings together practicing scientists, engineers, and theologians from across South East Asia and beyond who have an interest in the dialogue between science and religion. We welcome those who have little prior experience of such dialogue, as we welcome those who have been engaged with it for decades.
